

SFA recalls marusan banana soy milk from Japan due to possible spoilage

08 November 2023 | News

The products with a 1,000ml volume have expiry dates ranging from November 4th, 2023 to April 12th, 2024

The products with a 1,000ml volume have expiry dates ranging from November 4th, 2023 to April 12th, 2024

The Singapore Food Agency (SFA) announced that Marusan banana soy milk from Japan is being recalled due to possible spoilage.

The products with a 1,000ml volume have expiry dates ranging from November 4th, 2023 to April 12th, 2024.

The Consumer Affairs Agency in Japan recalled the products, which were also imported into Singapore.

SFA has instructed Imei (Exim) to recall their products, and the recall is currently in progress.

Consumers who have purchased these products should not consume them and those who have already consumed them and feel unwell should seek medical attention.

If you have any questions, you can get in touch with the SFA or your point of purchase for more information.