Most advanced distillery in the United States commences operations on schedule

Whiskey House of Kentucky (Whiskey House), the newest and most advanced distillery in the United States, announced operations officially began yesterday, as initially projected. Located on a 176-acre campus in the T.J. Patterson Elizabethtown Hardin County Industrial Park, Whiskey House is the most sophisticated, technically advanced producer of custom bourbon, rye, and American whiskey in the United States.

Whiskey House was initially founded in 2022 by David Mandell, John Hargrove and Daniel Linde, the team that started and built The Bardstown Bourbon Company. As the first distillery designed from the ground up to focus solely on large-scale, flexible, contract whiskey production, Whiskey House has no brands of its own and its campus is closed to the public, removing all potential conflicts of interest between the company and its customers. The team is hyper-focused on providing superior custom whiskey production, innovative liquid design, exceptional customer service, and the most competitive pricing for its exclusive branded clients.

"Thanks to our incredible team, construction partners, service providers and vendors, we've delivered the most advanced distillery in the United States in just over two years," said co-founder and CEO David Mandell. "Our state-of-the-art facility not only provides unmatched quality, flexibility and production capabilities, but we've also assembled the best team in American whiskey to deliver exceptional customer service for our exclusive brand partners."
