With the grand opening of the warehousing and logistics centre, the company has started a new chapter of its business and development

Farmmi, an agricultural products supplier in China, announced the successful opening of the company's warehouse and distribution centre in Los Angeles, California. On the first day of its operations on August 12, 2024, the distribution centre received warehousing orders for 28 shipping containers. With the grand opening of the warehousing and logistics centre, the Company has started a new chapter of its business and development.

In July 2024, The company established its first warehouse and logistics centre following the acquisition of the right to use a large storage facility located in Los Angeles, California. After nearly a month of preparation, the logistics centre began trial operations on August 12, 2024, and had a successful opening day with the number of customer orders far exceeding management's expectations. In the coming days, the company's American team will accelerate its efforts and strive for greater operating results. To that end, the company's business in North America has entered a rapid development stage.

Yefang Zhang, Farmmi's Chairwoman and CEO, commented, To further expand international cooperation and create long-term value for its shareholders, the company is committed to and has implemented strategies for global business expansion in recent years. The successful launch of its warehouse and logistics services centre in the U.S. marks a significant development for the company in achieving organic growth and international expansion.
