

ALDI Australia joins Australian Food Pact to help combat food waste

17 January 2025 | News

The partnership with End Food Waste Australia will support ALDI in solidifying its position as a collaborative partner in food waste reduction not just in stores

The partnership with End Food Waste Australia will support ALDI in solidifying its position as a collaborative partner in food waste reduction not just in stores

ALDI Australia becomes a proud signatory to the Australian Food Pact as part of its mission to zero in on food waste

ALDI Australia is solidifying its commitment to reduce food waste nationwide by officially joining the Australian Food Pact (the Pact) to support a more resilient food system. The partnership with End Food Waste Australia will support ALDI in solidifying its position as a collaborative partner in food waste reduction not just in stores, but across the entire value chain.

By leveraging the Pact's expert knowledge and resources in industry engagement, customer behaviour and research, this strategic partnership will enable ALDI to better implement high-impact projects that make a real Good Difference in reducing food waste.

ALDI has long-standing established partnerships with hundreds of local food rescue partners, including OzHarvest and Foodbank, who help facilitate the redistribution of surplus edible food to Australians in need. In 2024, over 15 million meals were donated through ALDI's food rescue efforts.