NFFOODS Spectrum
perspectives on food technologies & business
ASIA

Mom's Meals expands impact in fight against nutrition insecurity

02 September 2025 | News

The company donated more than 23,000 medically tailored meals through its Hunger Challenge initiative

The company donated more than 23,000 medically tailored meals through its Hunger Challenge initiative

As the most comprehensive provider of food as medicine solutions nationwide, Mom's Meals is expanding its impact beyond its core services by addressing nutrition insecurity through meaningful corporate social responsibility (CSR) initiatives. In the first half of 2025, the company donated more than 23,000 medically tailored meals through its Hunger Challenge initiative, distributed nearly 2,000 shelf-stable meals and contributed over $50,000 in donated ingredients to support individuals who struggle to access the right foods for their health.

"Nutrition insecurity is a challenge affecting millions of people across the country," said Chris Choi, chief executive officer of Mom's Meals. "We know that getting the right nutrition is essential to good health, but it's not always easy for people to access meals that meet their individual needs and promote a healthy lifestyle. At Mom's Meals, we believe food is care and that means making sure our nutrition solutions reach people who otherwise might go without. That's why we're committed to being part of the solution, whether through our food as medicine offerings or by giving back to the communities we serve."

Mom's Meals partners with health care and community organisations to empower people to live healthier lives through delicious, nutritious food, expert guidance and caring support. CSR is one of the many ways the company fulfils its brand promise â?? bringing both comfort and confidence to individuals through trusted nutrition support.